Two Christmas Stories

By KATHERINE GLOVER

[Copyright, 1906, by Katherine Glover.]

"SHE ISN'T COMING."

It was Christmas eve, and Carl's little bohemian restaurant was beginning to fill with gay, laughing folk, who sauntered in by twos and threes, the men slapping one another on the shoulders as they passed, bantering the little German proprietor and taking calm and easy possession of things, as if they were well used to the ways of the place. Shabby and ill kept most of them looked, but their faces were bright and their lips were bubbling with little snatches of song, overflowing evidently from hearts full of gayety.

At one table in a corner sat a man apart from the crowd and clearly oblivious to the life of the place, his eyes eagerly watching first the clock and then the door. Once or twice he started and half rose from his chair as some one entered, scanning a face closely, only to sink back with a long sigh. It was five minutes of 7 o'clock. "She isn't coming," he thought, and he let his chin fall heavily into his palm while he tried to gather his thoughts. At last, half conscious of some one approaching, he looked up and found a girl standing there, her hand outstretched. "I am late," she said hurriedly. "Have I kept you waiting long?"

"Yes, but it doesn't matter. Nothing matters now that you are here," he said warmly, taking her hand in both of his. "Sit down and let me look at you." He drew out her chair and seated himself opposite. Both were silent for a moment while they looked steadily into each other's eyes. The color rose slowly in the girl's cheeks, and she turned away.

"It is almost like old times, isn't it?" she asked, with a nervous little laugh.

"Like all the best of the old times rolled into one," he said. "Heavens, how I have wanted to be back, Joyce!"

"We are both growing too old to be sentimental, Jack. I want you to tell me all about Paris and your success. I read about you and I was very proud to be an old friend of the distinguished young American artist, Mr. John Hamilton Seawell."

They were interrupted by the waiter, an old friend of the two, who bowed and scraped an infinite number of times before they could stop him. "Tonight we are to have all the things we used to pretend we didn't like because the figures were too steep for our incomes, with a few of the more familiar things thrown in for auld lang syne," he said, scanning the menu card. Joyce nodded her head and smiled, and the order was finally given after a long conference of the three.

When the waiter brought the dinner, the table was heaped with little dishes of all sorts, more than they could possibly have eaten if they had been saving up for this one meal during all the time of their separation. In reality they were both too excited to be hungry, and their tongues went so fast that there was time only for spasmodic dips into the various dishes. When the dinner tapered off to coffee and cheese, however, they both fell into silence. The man lighted a cigar in the old easy way they were used to and said between puffs, "I want to tell you a story, Mlle. Joyce, if you will listen."

"I shall be most happy," she said with assumed gayety. "But be sure to make it end well. I don't like sad stories on Christmas eve."

"I shall do my best not to make it end unhappily, but that isn't for me to say. Well, here goes:

"Once upon a time there lived a dear, foolish maiden and a stupid, struggling artist, whom she befriended. The maiden at least ought to have been very rich, possessor of stately mansions and all that sort of thing, if she had had her deserts, but, truth to tell, both of them were very, very poor—so poor that the maiden used to wear frayed skirts and cracked shoes sometimes, though she laughed and pretended she did it for fun, and the artist was so poor that—well, he was poorer than any really respectable person ever was before. The two lived next door neighbors high up in the same cheap boarding house in a busy little city called New York. For some unfathomable reason the maiden took pity on the artist and used to help him out of his domestic difficulties and try to patch up his moral snags and tears as well. She was his good angel and made the days of struggling worth while for the stupid artist. She used to write wonderful stories—much too wonderful to be appreciated by the earthy editors she had to submit them to. In spite of their poverty, they used to have good times together, those two. When things grew very somber they would help each other jeer at fortune. There was a little restaurant where they would have jolly dinners whenever the artist sold a sketch or two. Carl, the keeper of the restaurant, was their friend and served them good dinners seasoned with sage philosophy. The day dawned when the artist had an opportunity to go abroad and study his art under the great masters—the thing he had longed for all his life.

"When the chance came, however, it seemed a small thing compared to the loss of the maiden. There was not money enough for both to go, so he preferred to stay and make a little home for her in the busy, heartless city. But for once the maiden was cold and unyielding, telling him that she didn't care enough for him to share his home. She sent him away with a heavier heart than he had ever had before. He went to Paris, where he pitched deep into work to try to forget the maiden, but thoughts of her would creep in in spite of himself, and sometimes her image, a laughing, haunting image, would steal in between him and his canvas, and then he would have to give up work for that day. It was no use. He would go out on the streets and walk and walk and walk, trying to wonder if the maiden's answer was final, calling up little scenes of their days together, conjuring up her looks to see if he could not again read in her eyes and find something there that he wanted. He wrote her long letters telling her a great many things that were not always kind. Some of the letters he sent across the ocean to her; others he tore up and tried to forget. But there were only three letters from her in all the four years he was gone, and they all came on Christmas eve. Long friendly letters they were, just like the chats they used to have, but with no sign of the thing he wanted her to write above all else. The stupid artist worked so hard that he could hardly help winning some shadowy success in all that time. There was a picture or two in the salon; his instructors grew encouraging; there was a line now and then in the papers, all of which puffed him up mightily because he vainly hoped they might make some difference with the maiden.

THEY WERE INTERRUPTED BY THE WAITER.

"When four years had passed the artist thought he might return to his home in New York and start his work there. He told himself over and over again that he was going home to the maiden, and his heart beat absurdly with hope of seeing her and then sank heavily again at thought of the change the years might have made, of the estrangement they might have brought. During the time he had been away she had written many stories and had finally convinced the editors of their worth. He saw her name in the contents of a number of magazines. The old days were changed. He would no longer find her in the cheap boarding house. If she sent him away three years before, she probably had almost forgotten him in all this time, but the thought of the Christmas letters spurred him to write to her and tell her of his return. He would reach New York the day before Christmas, the anniversary of his leaving. Would she meet him that evening at half past 6 in the little restaurant? He would wait for her at their same table in the corner, and they would talk over old times. The artist arrived in New York on the day he expected, and all afternoon he wandered about, waiting for the hour of their engagement, yet half dreading it for fear she should not come. But the good fairy waved her wand for him this time, for the maiden really came, and she is just the same, dear, sweet maiden as in the old days, only the shabby clothes are replaced by new, well cut things, and there is a quiet air of prosperity about her. She looks just a little older, perhaps, and the eyes are a trifle more serious, but they are the same tender, splendid eyes, reflecting a big, sweet soul. The two talked over many things, but all the time the artist has searched the maiden's eyes to see if he could find there any sign of what he has longed for all these years, a different answer to the question he put to her four years ago. He is eager to offer again to make a home for her and to spend his life trying to make her the happiest woman in all the world."

He looked over at the girl. "It is for you to end the story," he said quietly.

Her cheeks were flushed, and she was toying with her spoon. She looked up at him a moment, and her eyes were shining. "I want to go back a little and change your story some. I shall begin where the artist had his opportunity to go abroad and study. When he told the maiden about the chance and offered to give it up for her it was the hardest thing she ever had to do in her life to refuse the sacrifice, but she had some small sense of right, and she knew what those years abroad would mean to his future, so she rebuffed him and made him do the thing she knew his head dictated, though his foolish, generous heart led him to offer the other. He thought it was hard for him, perhaps, but he had Paris, with all its diversions, and the spur of his new work, while she had only the lonely sense of his absence. She used to haunt the places where they had been together, and sometimes the days dragged so that only the thought of the millstone she would have been to him if she had acceded to his plan kept her from doing some desperate thing. Then there came his letters begging her for some line in return, and that was the hardest battle of all. She fought it steadily for three days before she won. She knew if she wrote to him her letters would keep her in his mind and that some time she might carelessly say something to bring him back sooner than he ought to come. It was hard not to yield to what her heart pleaded for, but she felt he could do his best work cut off from thoughts of her and then"—Joyce paused.

"SHE USED TO WRITE WONDERFUL STORIES."

"And then?" the man said quickly.

"She thought perhaps he might have fooled himself that he wanted to marry her while circumstances drew their lives so closely together. Now that he was seeing more of the world and meeting other women he would weigh the matter and would learn his mind. If he came back and still wanted her, she would know he meant it, and"—

"Yes?" the man broke in eagerly.

"That's all," she ended lamely, smiling up at him.

"No, not all. Together shall we try to end the stories with 'They lived happily ever after?'"

She reached out her hands to him for answer, and he closed them tenderly in his.

The hole that's in the chimney flue
An' hops out here, I bet he'll bring
Whole lots of toys an' everything
That little girls like best. Don't you?
AN' there'll be dolls with dresses new
An' eyes that open big an' blue
When they sit up—an' cry an' sing,
When Santy comes.
AN' he'll fetch nuts an' candy, too,
An' cats that, when you squeeze 'em, mew.
My brother Bob he says, I jing,
He'd like to sit round listening.
He says: "I'll tell you what I'd do.
I'd jist jump out an' holler 'Boo!'

Christmas of Bulls and Bears

By JAMES ARTHUR

THE Christmas spirit is about the only thing traded in on Dec. 24 on Wall street, and the brokers have a celebration each year that literally jars things loose. The features of this ceremony vary, but the horseplay does not. The brokers let off the tension and have a good time generally. The festivities begin at noon and sometimes last for several hours. The galleries fill early, mostly with wives and sweethearts of the members on the floor. The Stock Exchange is liberally draped with green and red. The Seventh Regiment band is on hand and as the chairman sounds the gong begins playing "The Star Spangled Banner" or some other patriotic air. Sometimes an elaborate programme is arranged, made up of minstrel acts, coon songs, comic talks and similar performances. But, whatever the especial form of the entertainment, the bulls and bears conduct themselves in much the same way. They make Rome howl. Hats are smashed; bags of confetti are thrown at the ladies in the gallery, who in turn empty the contents over the heads and shoulders of the shouting brokers below.

If there happen to be new members they are "initiated" and are carried about the room in a yelling procession to the music of the band. On one such occasion an amateur football game was played in the great chamber of the Stock Exchange. Afterward the members indulged in a cakewalk for an immense forty pound cake, which was temptingly displayed on the chairman's balcony. One staid old financier played the piano, another strummed on a guitar, while the younger brokers cut pigeon wings about the floor. In older years a Christmas tree graced the Stock Exchange celebrations, all sorts of comic presents were handed out, and the carnival ended up by everybody telling jokes on everybody else. Of recent years this formal observance of the day has been abandoned. Now the ceremony is simply a small edition of pandemonium, a sort of frenzied Christmas, as it were.

The celebration of last year will give an idea of these Christmas eve frolics in Wall street. At five minutes before noon the whole floor seemed intent on business, pushing up U. P. and other stocks and hurling puts and calls back and forth like a game of battledoor and shuttlecock. Promptly at 12 the great gong sounded, and in the twinkling of an eye the scene was transformed. From somewhere appeared a band and began playing "Everybody Works but Father," and all the brokers howled in chorus. A rope was stretched across the room, and visitors crowded into the open space outside. Pads of paper and everything else that was loose were gathered up and hurled through the air, hats were used as missiles, great showers of colored paper were thrown here and there, and the din was greater than it is even in a panic. Dozens of young men formed circles about older men in the game of "bull in the ring."

At this moment appeared a great push ball, six feet in diameter, which was sent spinning across the floor, only to be hurled back again, bowling over men in its flight. To and fro went the great rubber sphere, while the shouting reached a pitch to drown out the band. Finally one broker was hoisted on to the ball, which promptly was kicked out from under him. But, though his legs were in the air, he was kept from falling and again regained his feet. Then the ball was rolled toward the high platform of the chairman, when another effort was made to whirl it out from under the broker's feet. Leaping, he caught an edge of the platform, scrambled over the railing and gravely shook hands with the venerable and dignified presiding officer. The hilarious ceremony was wound up by a collection being taken for the messenger boys and attendants, which mounted up to thousands of dollars.

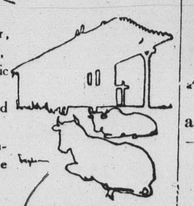
Whatever new methods of playing horse will be introduced in high finance circles for the Christmas eve festivities this year, it is certain that the men who make and wreck fortunes will enjoy themselves.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE

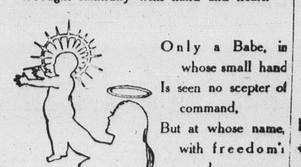
By FRANK H. SWEET

ONLY a star, a shining star,
More glorious than our planets are,
But watched by wistful eyes and bright,
And longing hearts, that wondrous night.



Only a manger, shadow thronged,
That to some public inn belonged,
Where sweet breathed cattle quietly
For midnight slumber bent the knee.

Only the light of tapers small,
That on two tender faces fall,
Two tender faces—one divine—
That still through all the centuries shine



TWO TENDER FACES ONE DIVINE.

From palace walls, from thrones of gold,
From churches, shrines, cathedrals old,
Where the grand masters of their art
Wrought faithfully with hand and heart.

Only a Babe, in whose small hand
Is seen no scepter of command,
But at whose name, with freedom's sword,
Move the great armies of the Lord.

Only a cross! But, oh, what light
Shines from God's throne of height!
His birth, his life, the angels see
Written on every Christmas tree.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and, through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

MERRY Christmas. Peace on earth good will to men. This is the tone of the Christmas spirit. It pervades the whole Christian world. It surges through the souls of thousands. Instilled in the hearts of the tiny children, it swells into a glorious anthem and reechos through all lands on the morn of the nativity. The philosophy of this one day has been mastered and is practiced, and though even for a day, there is hope even in that. The universal note that is struck has in it possibilities that seem verging on the divine. It is a spark of the higher life.

An Old "Skate" that Had Ginger in Him.

There was wild excitement for a few minutes on Napa street near the noon hour yesterday. A light express wagon became cramped in front of Dubring's store and at one time it came near tipping over. Bystanders, however, seized the wheels and straightend things out. The nag hitched to the vehicle took offense at this intrusion and with a snort attempted to run away. Emile Cornelius, who was driving the animal had alighted from the wagon, but still had hold of the lines and attempted to check the affrighted steed, who tore down the street, scattering pedestrians and bicycle riders like chaff before the wind. Fortunately Cornelius got the old skate under control before he had decimated the inhabitants of the town.

Valuable Horse Shot by a Reckless Hunter.

A valuable colt belonging to Mr. Robt. Hall was wantonly shot last Monday by some reckless hunter. The animal was grazing in the pasture lands of Mr. Hall's big farm and was shot in three different places, presumably with a small bore rifle. The animal will recover but may be ruined. Mr. Hall offers a reward of $25 in these columns for the arrest and conviction of the miscreant and strictly forbids hunting and trespassing on his premises in the future.

From a given amount of wood the

with the Hot Blast Down-Draft will produce twice as much heat as any other. It is because the Down-Draft consumes all the fuel and the gases which arise from it, whereas in other heaters the gases, which constitute one-half the burnable part of the fuel, escape unburned up the chimney. You can start a fire in ten minutes and hold it for 36 hours.

Remember, it is fuel cost which counts.

The Wilson saves one-half your fuel bill.

Visit Eldridge Home.

State Senator-elect Walter F. Price and Assemblymen-elect Weske and Collister visited the California Home at Eldridge on Friday of last week. The object of the visit was to look into the needs of the institution so as to be prepared when the Legislature meets in January to see that the necessary appropreations are made for its improvement and maintenance.

Long Tennessee Fight.

For twenty years W. L. Rawls of Bells, Tenn., fought nasal catarrh. He writes: "The swelling and soreness inside my nose was fearful till I began applying Bucklen's Arnica salve to the sore surface; this caused the soreness and swelling to disappear never to return." Best salve in existence. 25c at L. S. Simmons' drug store.

ALTIMERA CLUB GOES OUT OF EXISTENCE.

It Was Hampered by "Skidoos" and Appeared to be Branded "23."

The Altimera Club, which was organized here last spring with great eclat and a membership of one hundred, is to go out of existence. The club, which was to be a swell one, was to own its own quarters. The club rooms were to be elegantly appointed with a library, reading rooms, billiard, card and bath rooms and all those essentials that go to make up a swell club. From the very outset there was a "skidoo" on the club and it was "23" for it when it came to providing baths for the club members, not that they belonged to the great unwashed, but this feature was to supply one of the wants of Sonoma, as there is not a public bath house in the town. Well, as above remarked, "23" loomed up on this proposition as the City Trustees very properly refused the club permission to run its waste water from the contemplated bath rooms into the open ditch on First-street West, and there was no other place to run the water This was the first backset encountered by the club and discouraged its members. This was followed by other "skidoos" and to it was determined to wind up the affairs of the embryo club and with that object in view some of the officers met Thursday evening, counted the cash on hand, paid the debts of the club and apportioned the balance of the funds on hand to those members who had paid their dues in advance.

The officers of the club embryo were as follows: President De Witt Montgomery; Vice Prssident, Dr. A E. Byron; Secretary, Walter C. Nolan; Treasurer, Arther Luce.

Death of Giacomo Pedroia

Giacomo Pedroia, familiarly known to all old residents as "Jim" Pedroia, is dead. He passed away in Napa last Monday after an illness of but a few days, pneumonia being the cause of death. The deceased resided here for many years previous to locating in Napa about eighteen months ago, being employed in the Central Market. He was a prominent member of Sonoma Grove, No. 75, U. A. O. D., under whose auspices the funeral took place here Thursday.

Deceased was a native of Switzerland and aged 43 years.

Deeded Property to His Daughters.

The late C. Aguillon, just previous to his death, transferred by deed of gift to his three daughters his real estate holdings. The deed, which was executed on the 6th inst., was not filed for record until last Tuesday.

Obsequies of C. Aguillon,

The obsequies over the remains of the late C. Aguillon were held here Saturday. The services in St. Francis' church were very impressive. Rev. Father Leahy's eulogy over the bier of deceased was both fitting and eloquent. After the church services the remains of the pioneer were followed to Mountain cemetery by a large concourse of friends.

The pall-bearers were Thomas Brown, T. J. McGimsey, A. Castex, Robt. A. Poppe, John Lounibos and L. Husson.

By Aurora.

Mrs. Olga Gordenker was the guest of Sonoma friends Tuesday.

Mr. J. Chauvet, who has been slightly under the weather the past few weeks, is now improving.

Mrs. N. E. Poston of Ontario, will shortly locate here.

Daniel Frideger transacted business in Sonoma Wednesday.

D. Schieck transacted business in the lower part of the valley last Monday.

Jacob Frideger visited relatives in San Francisco several days the fore part of the week.

Henry J. Chauvet, A. Froment and Mr. and Mrs. Robt. P. Hill attended the funeral of C. Aguillon in Sonoma last Saturday.

Jack London and his wife have left their ranch and are now in San Francisco making preparations for their seven-years voyage in the "Snark."

Mr. and Mrs. A. Froment have left for San Francisco and will be absent several months. The absence of this worthy couple will create quite a void here. Mr. Froment is the President of the Dunbar Improvement Club and a member of the High School Board and as such has taken great interest in educational matters and public improvements up this way.

C. L. Tabor, conductor on the Southern Pacific freight train, met with a serious accident here Monday morning. He was assisting the brakesmen in coupling cars and while attempting to kick the couplings together they failed to catch and his right foot was caught between two freight cars and badly crushed. The injured man was taken to Santa Rosa and a portion of the foot amputated.

Mary Fernocchia, daughter of Mr. Farnocchia, a well-known business man of this place, who suddenly disappeared several weeks ago with two hundred dollars belonging to her father and a supposed lover, is again an inmate of the Farnocchia household. She was tracted to Indianapolis by Sheriff Grace and arrested on a warrant sworn out by the father. The officer arrived at the county seat Thursday morning with his fair young prisoner, who was immediately released on bail, after which she took the afternoon train for this place. The girl gave as her reason for running away that she was tired of living in Glen Ellen. She admits taking the coin, but says the lover part of the business was a myth pure and simple and that she had no companion in her travels. There is great rejoicing in the Fernocchia home over her return and the fatted calf will be killed for Christmas just as it was in those biblical days when the prodigal son returned from his journeyings abroad.

The Christmas Anthem

By ARTHUR J. BURDICK

[Copyright, 1906, by Arthur J. Burdick.]

THE CONTRALTO.

F there's one thing that this Christmas
More than others I desire,
'Tis to hear a Christmas anthem
By the old time village choir.
I may live to be a hundred,
But I never will forget
Christmas in the old home village
And the good old time quartet.

THE TENOR.

There was Liza Briggs, contralto;
The soprano, Mary Jones,
And the tenor who was noted
For the clearness of his tones.
But the basso was the stunner—
Had a voice so hoarse and strong
It would fairly knock the cliven,
So to speak, right off of song!

I can recollect the anthem
Always sung on Christmas day.
"Gloo-rye, gloo-rye, in the 'ighest!"
We could hear the tenor say.
Then the basso joined the effort.
"Pay-son sirth, goo-dwill toe man;
Gloo-rye, pay-son, gloo-rye, pay-son"—
That's the way the anthem ran.

"AWNGILS SANG THE GLAWD REEF-RAIN."

Then the women gathered courage:
"Awngils sang the glawd reef-rain;"
And the basso followed after:
"Awngils, raff-rain," o'er again.
"Reef-rain," "raff-rain," "ruff-rain," "reof-rain,"
Shouted each; then all went back
And began again at "Gloo-rye,"
Sailing on another tack.

THE SOPRANO.

After various frantic efforts,
Going back from time to time,
Singly, doubly, all together,
In a climax quite sublime,
They all met at last in concert
On the anthem's final note
And, to peaceful silence sinking,
Let their voices gently float.

THE BASSO.

'Twas a pleasure thus to listen
And to watch the vocal race.
Once again I'd like to hear them
And behold each well known face.
I may live to be a hundred,
But I never will forget
Christmas in the old home village
And that good old time quartet.

She Opened the Door.

A doctor who had saved the life of a woman, a personal friend, was asked his charge. He said he generally allowed his patient friends to remunerate him as they thought befitting.

"But don't you often get disappointed on these terms?" she inquired.

"I may say, never."

"As you are so easily pleased, here," and she playfully gave him her empty hand, while in the other was concealed a check for a handsome sum. "How easily I could have taken you in!" she added, producing the check.

"But you have only succeeded in drawing me out," he said, declining to relinquish her hand. "Don't insult me with a check. I am most generously rewarded."

Perhaps she understood the doctor's difficulty and wished to help him out of it. At any rate, the giving of her hand led him to offer his heart.

Children's

favorite tonic is White's Cream Vermifuge, the cure for worms and all children's diseases. It not only kills the worms, but removes the mucus and slime in which they build their nests. Its action on the child is mild and lenves him in a healthy condition. Joe Daniel, Surmac, Tenn., says that he gave one of his children White's Cream Vermifuge when the doctor thought it had colic, and from the first dose the child passed 73 worms. Sold at Simmons' Drug Store.

King of All Cough Medicines.

Mr. E. G. Case, a mail carrier of Canton Center, Conn., who has been in the U. S. Service for about sixteen years, says: "We have tried many cough medicines for croup, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time. We also find it the best remedy for coughs and colds, giving certain results and leaving no bad after effects. We are never without it in the house. For sale by L. S. Simmons, druggist.

A MIND OF HIS OWN.

The Manner of Man That Mr. Stiggly Likes to Meet.

"I like a man with a mind of his own," said Mr. Stiggly. "Right or wrong, I like a man who knows what he thinks and who is not afraid to speak it. I hate a man who doesn't know what he thinks or who is afraid to say what he does think.

"Now, there's Jones. I say to Jones on a lowery morning:

"'What do you think, Jonesy. Think I'd better take an umbrella?'

"And Jones says:

"'Take an umbrella? Why, within twenty-two minutes it'll be raining blue, green and purple pitchforks, and if you haven't got a boiler iron umbrella with I beam ribs you'll be speared to death and then drowned. Sure you want an umbrella!'

"Or suppose it had happened to be Robinson I asked, another man who knows what he thinks, and Robinson says:

"'Umbrella! Foolish! In twenty minutes it'll be as clear as a bell. All blue sky.'

"Now, of course Jones and Robinson couldn't both be right, but I would rather lug an umbrella uselessly, following Jones, or get drenched following Robinson—be led by a man who had a mind of his own and wasn't afraid to speak it—than to hear what I would get from Snibbly if I asked him:

"'Better take an umbrella, hadn't I?' I say to Snibbly, to hear him saying:

"'Ye-es, I suppose it would be safer.'

"Snibbly doesn't know what he thinks about the weather or about anything else, and if he does know what he thinks he doesn't say it. He sides in with me. He thinks it would be safer!

"I like the man with a mind of his own, and he is everywhere the man that makes the wheels go around."—Washington Post.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

There is no other medicine manufactured that has received so much praise and so many expressions of gratitude as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is effective, and prompt relief follows its use. Grateful parents everywhere do not hesitate to testify to its merits for the benefit of others. It is a certain cure for croup and will prevent the attack if given at the first appearance of the disease. It is especially adapted to children, as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr. E. A. Humphreys, a well known resident and clerk in the store of Mr. E Lock of Alice, Cape Colony, South Africa, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to ward off croup and colds in my family. I found it to be very satisfactory and it gives me pleasure to recommend it." For sale by L. S. Simmons, druggist.

Early to Bed

and early to rise, makes one healthy, happy and wise—especially if you take Herbine before retiring. A positive cure for Constipation Dyspepsia and all liver complaints. Mrs. S—, Columbia, Tenn., writes: "I always keep a suppiy of your Herbine on hand. Am so pleased with the relief it gives in constipation and all liver complaints, that words can't express my appreciation." For sale at Simmons' drug store.

No Opium in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

There is not the least danger in giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to small children as it contains no opium or other harmful drug. It has an established reputation of more than thirty years as the most successful medicine in use for colds, croup and whooping cough. It always cures and is pleasant to take. Children like it. For sale by L. S. Simmons.
